

Feedback on local NHS services

It's for you, your family and carers, and people you care about.

Do you get health services from South London Healthcare NHS Trust?

Like going to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Woolwich, Queen Mary's Hospital Sidcup or the Princess Royal Hospital Farnborough.

Are you happy OR unhappy about the care that you get from health staff?

Are you worried about someone you know and the health care they are getting?

Health services are meant to make you feel better.

Sometimes it might not feel like that.

You can tell us how you feel.
How you feel is important to us at the NHS.

We won't take sides.
We want to be fair to everyone.

What you tell us will be kept private.
We will only tell the people who need to know.

We can make a plan with you to make things better.

Stories:

Here are some real stories about people who let us know their health care had made them unhappy

Aaron has a learning disability, he isn't able to say what is on his mind and needs help with eating and drinking.

Once he had to stay in hospital overnight and a nurse gave him a pack of sandwiches for his supper.

Aaron wanted the sandwich but couldn't open the packet by himself. In the morning, Aaron's family came to see him and saw Aaron had not been able to eat, and was really hungry.

Aaron's family spoke to the Matron. The Matron spoke to the nurse, and explained where she went wrong, and the nurse apologised to Aaron and his family.

Sally has Down syndrome and sometimes her speech is not very clear.

Sally arrived early for an out-patient appointment at the hospital, and tried to explain this to the receptionist. The receptionist couldn't understand what Sally was saying, and was rude to her.

Sally felt really embarrassed and angry and told the doctor how she felt. The doctor spoke to the manager about Sally's feedback.

The receptionist and manager apologised to Sally, for upsetting her and explained they would now also use a computer system for patients who wanted to check themselves in when they arrive for an appointment.

You can take someone you trust with you to talk to the NHS if you want to.

You can ask for an advocate to support you.

An advocate is a person whose job is to support people to say what they think.

I want to feedback, what do I do?
